Impact in the care setting

“Since GPA training, our staff have more tools to manage responsive behaviours better, they have been able to problem solve and make better choices when performing care.”

– Maddi Steller-Cain, Executive Director, Aberdeen Gardens

Lionel’s story

One morning during personal care time, one of the residents, Lionel (name changed), exhibited behaviour that was unusual for him. The PSW with him was worried — he appeared to be in a state of delirium, but she was unable to determine his exact situation. He refused morning care and left his room wearing only a brief and undershirt. He walked to the elevator screaming and shouting. Nicole was called to assist. When she approached Lionel, she saw that he was in a state of crisis and at high risk for a fall/injury given his inability to recognize danger.

When Lionel began to strike out, staff kept a safe distance, standing in the GPA Reassurance Position (see photo, top right), allowed him to see that they meant him no harm and their only intent was to help him. Staff knew Lionel well and were able to use his strong religious faith to to successfully verbally redirect him. They safely escorted Lionel back to his room where his family was waiting for him. He was then taken to the hospital where he was diagnosed with delirium and treated for an underlying condition.

“I was extremely proud of how quickly and efficiently our team worked to help diffuse the following situation in care. Everyone had a job and knew exactly what to do, from keeping other residents away in order to not cause a scene and escalate any behaviours, to ensuring that one point person talked to and dealt with our resident, Lionel, while another stood close by, ready to respond if necessary.”

GPA teaches

- ✓ The Reassurance Position (photo, top left) offers continued support to the person while honouring their personal space.
- ✓ Following an interaction or application of a physical technique, GPA teaches care providers to resume the reassurance position and support the person from a safe distance.
- ✓ All behaviour has meaning. Aberdeen staff recognized that Lionel’s behaviour was unusual for him. They used GPA strategies and techniques to calm him so that they could take him to the hospital to receive medical care.

Are your staff confident in situations that involve responsive behaviours?
